GUADARRAMA NATIONAL PARK

The residence is located in Sierra de Guadarrama National Park in the Eastern part of the Central Mountains and covers the heights of Sierra de Guadarrama, occupying a 33.960-hectare extension. Peñalara Mount, 2.428 metres high, is the highest in the area and, together with Risco de Claveles, 2.388 metres high, make up the ridge of Peñalara Massif.

The Park has some Visitor Centers offering basic services: information, visitor attention and access to a hosting infrastructure at the main entrance points in the National Park.

Numerous forest tracks run the Sierra de Guadarrama getting into the National Park. In some villages, which compose the socioeconomic Influence area in the National Park, we can find a variety of museums, from picture, ethnographic, arqueological, tapestry or glass collections to skiing.

ACTIVITIES

Trekking: countless tracks and paths, which the inhabitants of the villages around the park once opened, have been later used by all kinds of visitors; nowadays, these paths comprise a net of trekking ways with hundreds of kilometres and tens of possible combinations.

Thematic Routes: a large variety of options, such as geological, botanical, ornithological, mycological or horse riding.

Sport activities: Winter sports such as alpine, cross-country or crossing skiing, snowshoes, sledges and snowboard, mountaineering, mountain bike, ice or rock climbing. It is possible to hire skiing beginners/polishing up courses with good discounts if you are a guest of the residence.

Touristic resources: monarchs, nobles and religious people have chosen for centuries the surroundings of these mountains to build up relevant constructions such as fortresses, monasteries or churches out of which are worth mentioning: Royal Monastery of Our Lady of Santa Maria de El Paular (Rascafría); Castle of Manzanares, Royal Palace of Riofrio, Royal Site of San Ildefonso or the close city of Segovia.
