Chianciano Terme

Chianciano Terme is a municipality in the Province of Siena in the Italian region Tuscany, located about 90 kilometres southeast of Florence and about 50 kilometres southeast of Siena. It is located between the Valdichiana and the Val d'Orcia. Chianciano Terme borders the following municipalities: Chiusi, Montepulciano, Pienza, Sarteano. Its history dates back to the 5th century BC, when the Etruscans built a temple dedicated to the god of Good Health, close to the Silene springs where the newer quarter of Chianciano (the famous Terme section) stands today.

The Archipelago of La Maddalena can rightly be considered the last paradise of north-eastern Sardinia before Corsica. Delicate turquoise colors of crystalline waters, green shades of lush Mediterranean vegetation, palettes of roses painted on millenary granites and white shining sands will leave you speechless.

And it cannot be otherwise in the face of these islands which since 1994 form one of the most evocative Natural Parks in the world, to visit at any time of the year: in the hot and bright summers tempered by winds (July and August are the hottest months with 18 ° minimum and 31 ° maximum), in mild winters, in pleasant springs when colors explode, or in autumn, when even the dry leaves carry the scent of the sea.
